TECHNICAL BULLETIN #25

July 11, 2001

Beginning August 1st, 2001, La Marzocco Int LLC will begin producing espresso machines that display an NSF sanitation certification sticker instead of the UL/NSF sanitation certification on the serial plate. The NSF certification and sticker will replace only the UL sanitation certification. The UL safety and electrical certifications remain unchanged and intact.

The physical changes on the Linea espresso machine will include: 1) Removal of the bottom plate on the frame. 2) Removal of the group(s) surround trim inside the control panel. 3) New bolts (3) on the group assembly(s). 4) Removal of the steam wand cover plates in the control panel. 5) New serial plate design and designation. 6) NSF sticker next to the serial plate.

La Marzocco has also included the FB70 espresso machine under the new NSF sanitation certification. The physical changes to the FB70 machines will be identical to the Linea machine as stated above.
